

Beat: Travel

ROME - NETHERLANDS SOCCER FANS GO ON RAMPAGE IN THE ITALIAN CAPITOL

DAMAGE TO ONE OF THE CITY'S SCULPTURES

Rome, Italy, 20.02.2015, 21:27 Time

USPA NEWS - The Netherlands said Friday that Feyenoord fans must pay for the damage they caused on Rome's famed Barcaccia fountain during a rampage ahead of a Europa League match against AS Roma Thursday. Police chief said officers did a good job and that litter and disorder had been preferable to rash action.

Drunken bottle-wielding Feyenoord fans made "around 100 scratches" on Bernini's Barcaccia, damage that was "permanent and irreparable", Culture Councillor Giovanna Marinelli said. The Netherlands "will do its utmost to help Italy identify the culprits so that they can pay" for the damage to the Barcaccia, the Dutch ambassador told Mayor Ignazio Marino Friday, according to a spokesman. "The mayor said 'if you break it you pay for it' and we agree, the culprits must pay, not the (Dutch) government", the spokesman said. Police Chief Nicolò D'Angelo said that "litter and disorder" had been preferable to "acting rashly" when the Feyenoord fans ran amok under the Spanish Steps. "I don't want to cause deaths," he said.

"The police did a good job," D'Angelo said.

"If anyone thinks I didn't do one, here I am (to take responsibility)," he added. D'Angelo said 1,800 men had been deployed after receiving contrasting reports that up to 300 or 600 hooligans were on their way. Some 600 of these officers were watching the historic centre, he said. "We did not underestimate nor hide our concern," D'Angelo said. The police chief added that his officers had headed off some 40 AS Roma fans who wanted to "take revenge" on the Feyenoord fans.

Earlier, Marino, Mayor of Rome, had said that the Netherlands has refused to pay for the devastation caused by the fans.

"I have spoken to the Dutch ambassador and I asked him - do you intend to pay for the damages?" Marino said. "He said that he did not think that the Dutch government could pay for the new restoration of the Barcaccia.

"Faced with this clear, legitimate refusal by the Dutch government, many Italian companies, institutions and banks called me yesterday evening saying they were ready to pay for the costs of the restoration".

As Roman prosecutors investigate the mayhem, Italian Olympic Committee (CONI) chief Giovanni Malagò said authorities must use "zero tolerance" on soccer violence and "the same measures that were applied in the past against (English) hooligans". European Commission Vice-President Frans Timmermans called for a hard line to be taken with the Dutch fans.

The Mayor of Rotterdam Ahmed Aboutaleb, in a letter to Marino, said his city "reacted with horror" to the news of the "reprehensible behavior of some of the Feyenoord fans", vowing "our collaboration to find the individuals who committed crimes".

Article online:

<https://www.uspa24.com/bericht-3368/rome-netherlands-soccer-fans-go-on-rampage-in-the-italian-capitol.html>

Editorial office and responsibility:

V.i.S.d.P. & Sect. 6 MDSiV (German Interstate Media Services Agreement): David Franciamore

Exemption from liability:

The publisher shall assume no liability for the accuracy or completeness of the published report and is merely providing space for the submission of and access to third-party content. Liability for the content of a report lies solely with the author of such report. David Franciamore

Editorial program service of General News Agency:

United Press Association, Inc.

3651 Lindell Road, Suite D168

Las Vegas, NV 89103, USA

(702) 943.0321 Local

(702) 943.0233 Facsimile

info@unitedpressassociation.org

info@gna24.com

www.gna24.com