PRESIDENT HOLLANDE RECEIVED FAMILIES OF THE 4 PASSENGERS ONBOARD FLIGHT MH370

MALAYSIAN AIRLINES DISAPPEARS MARCH 2014

Paris, Washington DC, 10.09.2015, 02:59 Time

USPA NEWS - After the tragedy of Malaysian MH370 flight which disappeared on 8 March 2014, it is still a mystery as the aircraft hasn't been found despite many searches in the South Indian Ocean. On 29 July, President Hollande received the families of the 4 passengers onboard the vanished plane.

MANY INVESTIGATIONS DID NOT FIND ANY ELEMENTS OF DEBRIS SO FAR-----On 29 July 2015, however, marine debris was found on Reunion Island (French Island) which was confirmed to be a from a Boeing 777; French and Malaysian officials are investigating whether this flaperon and other debris found in the following days are related to Flight 370. Since 30 March 2014, the search has been coordinated by the Joint Agency Coordination Centre (JACC), an Australian government agency established specifically to co-ordinate the search effort to locate and recover Flight 370, which primarily involves the Malaysian, Chinese, and Australian governments.

"The President of the French Republic received the families of the four French passengers who were aboard the flight MH370 Malaysia Airlines disappeared March 8th, 2014. The French Head of State expressed the support of the nation in the painful ordeal of victims' families who remain uncertain about the specific circumstances of the disappearance. After the confirmation that the wing fragment discovered in Reunion July 29 match the MH370 flight, he made a point with families on research undertaken. He assured them the mobilisation of state services in support of ongoing legal proceedings in France and abroad to help to shed light on this plane crash."
